"Having just received a letter from Mr. Adam informing me that the settlements on me and the children only waited for the signature of the Duke to finally conclude the business, I feel it a duty to endeavour to express through you to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent that I am most perfectly satisfied with the arrangements, that the Duke of Clarence has thought proper to make, and at the same time most truly grateful for the part that the Regent was so good as to take in the business. I shall very shortly quit Bushy . . . but I am sorry to give you pain in being obliged to say that I shall quit it under some very distressing pecuniary embarrassments, and which I know it is not in H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence's power to relieve me from [?] since this unfortunate business I have been under the necessity of borrowing money to quiet tradespeople, who under other circumstances would have waited till perfectly convenient to myself; I have a house to furnish, to commence housekeeping with a large family without any ready money whatever. . . . I mean to make my present difficulties known to such of the Royal Brothers as I have had the honor to have been noticed by, and trust and hope the extraordinary circumstances attending my situation will in some degree plead my excuse—800 altogether would set me at ease. . . ."

 "Thinking it almost impossible to bring a Fleet of Forty sail of the line, into line of Battle, in variable winds, thick weather, and other circumstances which must . . . out such a loss of time that the opportunity would probably be lost of bringing the Enemy to Battle, in such a manner as to make the business decisive.

"I have therefore made up my mind to keep the Fleet in that position of sailing (with exception of the first and second in command) that the order of sailing is to be the order of Battle, placing the Fleet in two lines of sixteen ships each, with an advanced squadron of eight of the fastest sailing two-deck'd ships, which will always make, if wanted, a line of twenty-four sail, on which ever line the Comm^r in Chief may direct.

"Something must be left to chance, nothing is sure in a Seafight beyond all others. Shot will carry away the Masts and Yards of friends as well as foes, but I look with confidence to a Victory before the Van of the Enemy would succour their Rear.

The Memo ends: "The remainder of the Enemy's Fleet, 34 sails, are to be left to the management of the Comm^r in Chief who will endeavour to take care that the movements of the second in Comm^d are as little interrupted as possible," with the following postscript: "When in presence of an Enemy all the Ships under my Comm^d are to wear White Colours, and a Union Jack is to be suspended from the Foretop Gallant stay."
